The More Difficult Resurrection

The more difficult resurrection is the practical one. God raised his Son early one morning, and we will all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. It takes time, however, and much living, for the character and nature of a person once dead in his sin to be renewed after the image of his creator.

It is true—and how grateful we are!—that a resurrection has already occurred when such a person was baptized into Christ. It was one in which that person was buried with him in baptism and raised with him in the powerful working of God. One forgiven of trespasses is to understand himself as made alive with Christ—as raised with him.

But now it remains for every word and deed to be done in his name. Those that are like him are to be made the way of life. Those that are not are to be put to death. This is the resurrection lived out—the more difficult one.

What kinds of things belong to death? Sexual immorality, impurity, passion, evil desire, covetousness, anger, wrath, malice, slander, obscene talk, lying, and whatever would be at home in this company.

What characterizes the realm of life? Compassion, kindness, humility, meekness, patience, mutual forbearance, forgiveness, intentional and unearned goodwill, peace, gratitude, and all conduct that conveys such qualities.

It is not that bodily resurrection requires less power. Of course, only the power that enables the Lord to subject all things to himself could accomplish such a thing. It is rather that the development of a new person requires our cooperation—and that is the more difficult thing.
